“We always had the problem that the developing countries are not members of IUPAP and consequently C13 consists of predominantly members from non-developing countries.

Do you have suggestions to get more members from the developing world on C13? The East European countries are also not represented in the list above.

The commission should consist of 13 members. We have 13 nominations. Years ago, one place was reserved for UNESCO because of their particular interest in science in the developing world. Should we return to that tradition?”
